action. Techniques for observing action through the use of a systematic process of examining the evidence are learned. Students should expect to be involved within an early childhood administrative setting for some or all of the day for a minimum of 10 weeks.

Prerequisites: Completion of all CDFS core major and Administration or Family Support concentration course work.

Course Goal:

Students will learn about and understand that organizational action research is an interactive, cyclical process intended to happen periodically on a regular basis. Reflection on practice, taking an action, reflecting, and taking further action as needed is what shapes the research as it is taking place.

Student Outcomes:

Upon completion of this course student will be able to:

1. Interpret how organizational action research provides opportunity for improvement of professional practice through evolving learning and progressive problem solving.
2. Examine action research methodology
3. Demonstrate skill application generating research questions and plans.
4. Construct and manage a clearly identified plan of action.
5. Assess how improvement is gained within an organization in which action is embedded through participatory research.

NAEYC Standards addressed in this course:

Standard 5: Using content knowledge to build meaningful curriculum

Standard 6: Becoming a professional

Instructional Methods:

The method of instruction will be a combination of reading assignments, Blackboard, audio conferencing with a large action research based project. Audio lectures will be recorded and blackboard discussion forums continually monitored. Students will demonstrate their understandings of course content and proficiency of skill through assignments and discussion. All assignments will be communicated through the assignments section of the course Bb site. Other communication will take place through email.

Field Experience Placement:

There is opportunity of many diverse early care and education settings for field experience work. Options include but are not limited to, School district preschools and kindergarten classes, Head Start and Early Head start as well as other state certified preschool programs.

The Child Development and Families Studies program will work with each student to assure they are placed in a program that will fit their goals and needs supporting successful completion of course.

There are at least three people directly involved in each field placement experience; the student, the site supervisor and the university faculty member. In addition, each student will be working within an early childhood setting with many interpersonal relationships being developed, so the children, families and other program staff must be considered in the equation as well.

Positive communication is essential for a successful career in early education, it is expected this will be demonstrated in field work as well. In the complex early childhood setting where field work is facilitated, there is the chance that there will be conflict and controversy. Positive communication does not mean the student will not have problems. It does mean that the student will have opportunity to learn by listening to constructive criticism, reflect on feedback and suggestions, modify and adapt, confront issues, share ideas, compromise and negotiate to find equitable solutions in an effort to satisfy all parties. The code of ethics should continually guide the student throughout this process.

Requirements and Assignments:

Reflection, writing, and dialogue on assigned text, class sessions, and field placement experiences.

Paper Guidelines:

Each student will write a 20 - 25 page minimum paper that explains your project and facilitation. Draw from the texts of past courses, class topic discussions, field tasks and written documentation to explain your project.

Address the following elements in your paper:

Brief – (1-2 pages) summary of what you have learned about research from the class. Please refer to your specific field assignments and reports.

Beginning reflections: (1 – 2 pages) reflect on developing your research. What are your thoughts about beginning this research project? What are you anticipating and wondering about? In what ways is this project relevant to you and the organization?

The bigger picture of content: (5 - 6 pages) An introduction or overview at the beginning sets a stage for the study, gives your own reasons for choosing research question (s), and describes where your research would fit into or extend existing research on this topic or question. Discuss your rationale for the research. Describe who might be interested in your research. Think beyond the larger audience than just yourself. You will want to include your research question(s), sub questions, plan for data collection, Plan for data analysis, state support that is needed to complete the project, permissions that would be necessary as well as how they were obtained, expected timeline.

Facilitation: (11 – 12) Share the implementation process. You will find your blackboard journaling notes helpful here.

Ending Reflection: (2 – 3 pages) How did it go? Did your implementation proceed exact to plan? Were your question(s) answered? Was this activity helpful to you as a classroom teacher? What would you do differently when working with another classroom research project?

Final program portfolio note: Final project will need to be kept for possible inclusion in final program portfolio which will be completed within the ECE 480 Child Development and Family Studies Portfolio course.
